WANT B. G. LUDWIG
TO STAY ON JOB

Successor Chosen by Supt.
H. G. Means, Reports

EAST LIVERPOOL, June 11.—The Ministerial association, composed of the pastors of all Protestant churches in the city, and 72 businessmen, citizens and taxpayers, has called upon the board of education to reappoint B. G. Ludwig, high school principal here for eight years. The appeal was made in the form of protests against the reported plan to name a new principal to succeed Mr. Ludwig, whose contract expires next year.

The school authorities, who deferred action on the appointment of a principal pending the return of Mr. George Brian from a business trip to Canada, said the Ministerial association letter, presented under the signature of the secretary, Rev. E. R. Reed, pastor of the Pennsylvania Ave. Methodist Episcopal church, would be acknowledged. However, there will be no acknowledgement of the citizens' petition, since no officer was designated in it.

Indications are action will be taken at a special meeting in a week or 10 days. Other members of the board are J. T. Croxall, Dr. Colin F. Kinney, F. H. Johnson and John W. Toddy.

Neither the board members nor Mr. Ludwig would discuss the situation today.

"For the good of the high school and our boys and girls," the Ministerial association urged the board of education to reconsider its action and retain Mr. Ludwig as principal of the high school.

Calling attention to his "Christian character," the pastors' letter said that "the dismissal of Mr. Ludwig would be a great loss not only to our schools but also to our city."

"He is a man of ability, absolute fairness and honesty," the communication concluded.

The citizens' petition protested the proposed dismissal of B. G. Ludwig as principal of the high school without complete and valid reasons being given to the public and respectfully request that Mr. Ludwig again be employed by the board of education as principal of the said high school."

Unconfirmed reports indicate that a new high school principal has been chosen by Supt. Herbert G. Means, but ratification of the appointment has been deferred by the board of education until all members can attend a meeting.

New Deal Flayed at "Grass Roots" Convention

Condemning the Roosevelt program as unconstitutional, delegates from 10 mid-western states, gathered at a Republican "grass roots" convention at Springfield, Ill., drew up a recovery program of their own. Principal figures at the convention, assembled at the Springfield Coliseum in the city linked historically with Lincoln, founder of the Republican party, included Frank O. Conservation

The regular monthly meeting of the Columbiana county Fish and Game Protection association was held last night at the Guilford grange hall, west of the County home. A brief entertainment program consisting of several vocal items, a reading and a two-act playlet was given under the auspices of the members of the group residing in the Guilford lake district.

R. F. Schario of Canton, a director of the League of Ohio Sportsmen, was the guest speaker. Mr. Schario discussed the importance of game conservation and rehabilitation of the wild game life of Ohio. He said "that if the natural breeding and feeding places of wild game were not restored in a few years wild game would be practically extinct in Ohio." He also told of some of the work that already had been done along the line of wild game conservation and restoration in Ohio.

7.—Disregard of state rights.

8.—Subjection of people to arbitrary dictates.

11.—Destruction of food; importation of supplies.

12.—Millions spent on acreage reduction; more millions on reclamation.

13.— Surrender of home markets to foreign nations.

14.—Destruction of free competition; creation of monopolies.

15.—Attempted control of commercial banking.

16.—Attempt to control a larger mass of wealth than ever before concentrated in one man.

17.—Use of power to put political pressure on hungry and needy.

18.—Desire for centralized power and distaste for constitution.

They would "point the way in which we can be helpful in ending the depression and in the preservation of American institutions," he declared.

Declare Grievances

The attack on President Roosevelt termed a "declaration of grievances," was brought in by Hayes, resolutions chairman, and was ratified with cheers by the 8,000 accredited delegates in the big Springfield fair grounds coliseum.

Provoking shouts and applause, Hayes declared "we hold the President personally responsible for the record of his administration."

"He has furnished a pattern of planned economy which, if carried out, spells the death of American institutions."

The President was further denounced as having shown a desire for centralized power and a "distaste for the Constitution," in commenting upon the supreme court's blow to NRA.

CORNERSTONE

Political experts may vary widely in their guesses on the ultimate appearance of the Republican party's platform for 1936, but the cornerstone has been laid. It was lowered into place Monday during the conference of middle western Republicans at Springfield, Ill.

They needed no debate to see that preservation of the basic principles of the Constitution was the party's best rallying cry. Other Republicans in other regions, possibly distrustful of the motive behind the Springfield conference, need no debate to be convinced of the same thing. The Democratic party has made the constitutional issue unavoidable by its record since 1932. That does not mean that a majority of Democrats deliberately have given an appearance of threatening constitutional principles, any more than Republicans in 1932 were guilty of bringing on the depression. It does mean that President Roosevelt will be held accountable for events which placed the Constitution in danger, as Mr. Hoover was made responsible for hard times in 1932.

Political issues are not made by politicians; they are used. In 1932, Democratic politicians used discontent with the condition of the country to elect Mr. Roosevelt. He attempted to do certain things to alleviate what had become by the spring of 1933 a critical condition, due partially to the uncertainty which unnervered the country between election day and inauguration day. Thus, the issues for the next campaign were predetermined to a great extent by Mr. Roosevelt's plan for emergency action and by the fact the Democratic party was shifted from an offensive into a defensive position. The constitutional issue in 1936 and possibly in 1940 can be called an inevitable accident. It has been handed on a platter to a party which would be foolish not to use it for all it is worth. More than an election is at stake. The two-party system is, after all, the American way of proceeding by trial and error to a constantly receding goal of better government. The question of the Constitution's continuance in its present form has been raised and must be settled.

WEAK LINK

If extortionists knew in advance they could not collect ransom, there would be no kidnapping. It has seemed to some Americans, worried over the threat of kidnapping, that the way to stop it is to prevent the victim's family from paying the money demanded by the criminals.

The remedy is no good, because life is more precious than property in such cases. Kidnapping, unfortunately, cannot be prevented by trying to prevent the payment of ransoms. Kidnapping can and is being discouraged, however, by taking advantage of the ransom negotiation.

The Weverhauser case illustrated clearly that ransom money, instead of an admission of defeat from agencies responsible for detection of extortionists, really is their most valuable implement. It provides a positive connection with the criminals.

Money isn't any good unless it can be spent. Few criminals who collect ransom money in an extortion case can afford to wait a long time before they start passing bills. By listing the serial numbers of the money and by other means of identification, police are able to make kidnappers trap themselves.

The Weyerhauser ransom bills made a plain trail for police to follow. The detection of two persons by this means and the identification of a third, who had ransom money in his automobile, give extortionists something new to worry about. What seemed to be a weak link in their favor is being made a weak link in the favor of their victims.

THE STARS SAY

For Wednesday, June 12

Judging by the rather weak influence of the planets on this day's affairs, individual effort and initiative may have full sway for favorable expression. However, it would be advisable not to take chances of any kind with finances, either in speculative enterprises or in loans.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which much of success and prosperity may depend on individual enterprise and initiative.

A child born on this day may have an agreeable nature, and a friendly disposition. But it may be diffident and backward in expressing itself. It should be reasoned out of timidity and self-effacement when young.

O. O. McINTYRE
NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, June 15—I have been collecting autographed pictures to decorate a room—pictures of old established friends of whom I am especially fond and whose talents I admire. Some of the messages scrawled across them are warming. Still others a bit insulting, the muggs!

I asked for no one's photograph whose friendship had not undergone a test. They will be racked in a nautilus where, when my ship comes in, I expect to spend much time in leisurely writing and philosophic contemplation. It will be a room with an open fireplace that burns real logs.

Shuffling through them before they went to the framer's I can be pardoned a glow of pride. With one or two exceptions all are around my age and all started from scratch. There are no silk stocking or golden spooned lads. All had the chances American democracy bestows and took advantage of them.

In the display will be Sinclair Lewis, Rupert Hughes, Irvin Cobb, John McCormack, Rube Goldberg, Paul Whiteman, Will Rogers, Theodore Dreiser, Roy Howard, Grantland Rice, Charles G. Norris, William Gaston, Will H. Hays, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Jack Dempsey and too many more to enumerate. But that gives the range.

Not many writers can approach the subject of friendship and veer around without pausing for a panegyric. And I am no exception. Every one believes his friends mean more to him than friends to any one else. I'm no exception to that either. So far as I know I have no false friends. There's not one who has not done more for me, graciously and unasked, than I for him. What so many call "lucky breaks" have been in my case the fruits of friendly gestures, many times so anonymous I did not learn the source for years. Some of the minor overtures are as warming as the big ones.

There's Jack Dempsey, who enduring the biff-bang rigors of a barn-storming tour heard he was within 50 miles of my town. He made an arduous trip over rough roads at night to visit it for an hour in the early morning, losing sleep that he needed. Somehow one does not associate that with a mauler whose ferocious glower and ripping punches made him the greatest terror the ring has ever known. Yet one learns it's only one of a thousand gracious acts he is constantly indulging.

When I was hacking away on a ponderous, antiquated typewriter in an obscure hotel room trying, it seemed then futilely, to convince reluctant editors I had a newspaper feature worth $2 a week, there came an opulent caller. He had hunted me out to tell me something I had written was rather good, he thought. He proved to be Charlie Norris, husband of the talented Kathleen, brother of the equally talented Frank and an arrived novelist himself. That day, for the first in many, I lived!

Also that blust of blue days when the whole existence seemed a balmy Gilead. An accumulation of despairs made the future chaos. Things would never be right again. In almost telepathic spontaneity there came a cable from London reading: "Are you all right?—Bill." It was from Will Hayes who had, miraculously I thought, taken time out from busy conferences to radiate light in a dark place.

Too, that lonely first day, when a rather fat job had just been shot from under me, I was trying for a toe-hold on the copy desk of the Evening Mail. About quitting time a fellow effervescent enthusiasm and vitality came over and introduced himself. He didn't, of course, have to tell me he was the best known cartoonist of his time, Rube Goldberg, or did he have to invite me to ride up town in his stumpy green roadster. But he did. And unknowingly renewed my waning courage immeasurably. So I could overflow many columns of those splendid and simple acts of graciousness that mean so much in retrospect—fidelities that make me a lifelong debtor to Webster, Bob Brinkerhoff, Ryley Cooper, Gene Buck, Floyd Gibbons, etc., and to two who are gone, Will Hogg and Arthur Roche.

That's why I want their likenesses strung around the wall so that in the gloaming the flicker from a back-log will danc an illumination upon them. And provide inspiration for those looking-back vistas from the easy chairs that widen our horizons and bring us so breathlessly near something that looms, then suddenly trembles away. The borderland of that something that may encompass the unattained possibility to which we are all groping—eternal friendship.

Guard against this evil and you will prevent the possibility of many constitutional disorders. It is a menace to health if neglected.

HEALTH

Good Health Habits

A MEDICAL writer recently stated that civilized man "eats too much, drinks too much and sits too much." These evil practices account for a large number of cases of constipation.

The individual who maintains regular meal habits, eats properly balanced diets, watches his posture, and indulges in a moderate amount of outdoor exercise rarely, if ever, suffers from constipation. A thorough elimination is impossible because of the hurry of the busy business man or of the housewife who rushes her domestic duties to keep pace with social demands.

This condition is looked upon too lightly by the majority of people. When the trouble persists it becomes a stumbling block to health and long life.

Cathartics Harmful

Too many sufferers from constipation, too, resort to the unwise use of cathartics in an endeavor to relieve the condition. This practice is bad for health because the constant use of such drugs will eventually impair the normal function of the bowel. To quote Elbert Hubbard, "In the race of life, the man with the educated bowels will eclipse the man with an educated brain; and drugs and chemicals that work while you sleep are a little later going to prevent your working when it is necessary to have sufficient bulk in the diet."

But there is a more important, really an almost universal cause for constipation. I refer to a faulty diet. If this is deficient in vegetables, fresh fruits and those foods known as "roughage," constipation is inevitable. To insure elimination and to keep the intestines active it is necessary to have sufficient bulk in the diet.

Many persons are indiscreet in their selection of foods. In many instances those that have laxative properties are omitted from the diet. Then there is sluggishness, with the result that decomposition products and poisons are absorbed into the system.

If you suffer from constipation avoid dependence on medicines and make sure you obtain your daily quota of bulky foods. Bear in mind that fruits, such as figs, dates, apricots, prunes and raisins are nutritive foods as well as laxative in their action. Vegetables, such as cabbage, carrots, cucumbers, lettuce, onions, tomatoes and celery add bulk to the diet and help promote elimination.

It is also wise to drink at least six or eight glasses of water daily. Many cases of constipation are caused by taking too little water. In severe cases, if the health is good otherwise, as much as two or three quarts of water may be taken every day.

Guard against this evil and you will prevent the possibility of many constitutional disorders. It is a menace to health if neglected.

WHOSE WIFE? A CYRUS K. MANTEL MURDER MYSTERY

by GLADYS SHAW ERSKINE AND IVAN FIRTH

SYNOPSIS

Lawrence Vane, noted portrait painter, is held as a material witness in connection with the murder of his bride of two months following the discovery of a headless nude body on the terrace of his penthouse apartment. Three weeks before that happened, two of his friends—Wilbur Renton and Roger Thornley—were discussing their love affairs and his recent marriage to Isobel Mackenzie who was well known to both. Renton's interest in Isobel had caused a break between him and Betty Potter, pretty young newspaperwoman who lives in the apartment beneath the Lawrence Vane's. Thornley says that he and his wife Millie, a former show-girl, are leaving for Seattle soon. Renton calls on Betty to aid his cause anew, now that Isobel has married. She tells him that they cannot marry and reluctantly admits that she had been in love with Vane. Renton bitterly denounces Isobel, exclaiming that he'd like to see her to death. Betty is purified by his words early the next morning. Wilbur Renton denies that he had anything to do about notifying the police concerning the Vane murder, and is worried privately because he had called on Betty Potter so close to the time of that homicide. Inspector Ingles visits Betty and is questioning her about Vane.

CHAPTER VII

Let us sit down a moment, Betty, and talk," said Ingles quietly. "The best thing would be if you will be frank with me. Surely you know by now that you can trust me completely." Absolutely. There is no one I trust more." Thank you. Then let's get to the bottom of certain things, in this terrible thing, if we can. A woman's life, my dear, have aided many a man where the slower moving end of the trained policemen has failed." He leaned over and gently took her hand where it lay upon his knee. "And when it's such a man, and such wit, the combination is hard to beat." He smiled at him tremulously and turned toward him with determination, and said: "What is it you want to know?"

"How well did you know Lawrence Vane?" asked Ingles gently. "Very well. I've known him for a number of years, and we've been close friends." Unconsciously her hand had dropped and softened. The Inspector looked at her closely. It was an odd mood to see on the mad-cap, laughing Betty. "Give him an idea. He persisted. "He's in love with you, Betty?"

"No," she said. "That was the trouble. It was I who cared the most, always."

The Inspector's big hand closed hers for a moment. Then he松了松.

"Then how do you feel about it, Betty? Would you help him out?"

"I'd help him in any way I could," she said earnestly. "But after all, I don't want to intrude on his sorrow, there's nothing I can do for him up there alone in his house."

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"What you read the papers?"

"I haven't yet. Suky told me a moment before you arrived that the...the...murder, and I didn't have the heart to read all about it. I just got the call from the paper, that I was to cover for the murder case, and that's all I know."

Absolutely. There is no one I trust more."

He leaned over and gently took her hand where it lay upon his knee.

"And when it's such a man, and such wit, the combination is hard to beat."

He smiled at him tremulously and turned toward him with determination, and said: "What is it you want to know?"

"How well did you know Lawrence Vane?" asked Ingles gently.

"Very well. I've known him for a number of years, and we've been close friends."

Little Known Facts About Banking

An Interesting Fact to be Remembered

It is not generally known that the banks outside the larger cities of the country have granted, all through the depression, far more loans, proportionately, than the banks from which "loan statistics" are usually gathered.

In fact, had it not been for the splendid cooperation of the independent, home-owned, home-managed banks in the smaller cities and communities, local enterprise would have suffered more than it did.

The so-called "country banker" by his knowledge of local conditions, his intimate acquaintance with his customers and his willingness to "go along" with worthy borrowers, helped far more than is generally known to cushion the heaviest blow ever felt by the American people.

WOMEN SELECT NEW PRESIDENT

Mrs. Roberta Lawson, of Tulsa, Okla., Heads Club Federation

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT, June 11—The leadership of 2,000,000 American club women swung from the east to the west today with the elevation to the presidency of the general federation of women's clubs of Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, of Tulsa, Okla., a descendant of pioneer families and granddaughter of the last tribal chief of the Delaware Indians. She succeeds Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole of Brockton, Mass.

Mrs. Lawson was elected president at the Triennial convention last night by a vote of 846 to 538 over Dr. Josephine L. Pierce of Lima, O. Another westerner, Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, of Portland, Ore., was named first vice president without opposition.

The convention of 5,000 delegates turned today to the report of the resolutions committee with the endorsement of American adherence to the world court and the dissemination of birth control information holding the top interest among eight resolutions.

"All the benefit that Grace Poole has achieved for the general federation will not be lost," said Mrs. Lawson, talented in music and literature, a speaker and a veteran in club work with 30 years of activity. "I consider Mrs. Poole's regime to have reached the peak of achievement thus far, a challenge beyond measure," she added.

SPORTS Chatter

The Moores

MUCH has been written about such famous baseball families as the Deans, the Waners and the Ferrells, but little or no mention is ever made of the most numerous of all big league families—the Moores.

Offhand we can recall at least six Moores now playing in the majors, and none of them is related to any of the others. Perhaps the best of this extremely numerous clan is "Safety Pin" Joe Moore, the galloping ghost of Gause, Texas, who patrols the outer garden for Bill Terry and his Giants.

The emaciated Texan is a great money player who is at his best in the clutch, which being interpreted, means that he is more than apt to come through with a much-needed bingle when the bags are occupied.

Then there is Ewell Moore, who tosses them up to the platter from the right side for the Phillies. Ewell (there's a name for you) is supposed to be some kind of an Indian—not the Cleveland variety—and is a pretty good pitcher at that.

Also with the phutile Phils we have a hard-smashing swat-smith yept Johnny Moore, who used to be with the Cubs but now chases fly balls for Jimmy Wilson. This member of the numerous Moore tribe had a stylish season with the willow last year and was one of the Phils' most menacing mowers.

And to name more and more Moores, we mustn't overlook Randy of the Braves, and Gene and Terry of the Cardinals.

PITTS PROBLEM BEFORE LANDIS

Former Convict To Take His Case Before Baseball's High Court

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, June 11.—Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's court of last resort, today had another big problem to settle—the case of Edwin C. "Alabama" Pitts.

The executive committee of the national association of minor professional baseball leagues yesterday declared void Pitts' contract with the Albany club of the international league, because he is an ex-convict. Immediately, Johnny Evers, manager of the Albany club, owner Joseph Cambria, and Pitts, himself, wired Landis asking a hearing in an effort to have the committee's decision overruled.

Landis, still suffering with the heavy cold which forced him to conduct the Walter Johnston-Wille Kamm case two weeks ago in his hotel suite, was expected to decide today on the requests of Pitts and the Albany club officials for a hearing. He refused comment on the case yesterday.

Evers, a Chicago Cub star in the famous "Tinker to Evers to Chance" era, bitterly resentful of changes in the exec committee decision, that his club's interest was inspired more by a desire to gain publicity than to capitalize on the former Sing Sing prison star athlete's talents, promised to retire from baseball if the decision were not overruled.

The executive committee's decision upheld the ruling by Judge William G. Bramham, president of the national association of professional baseball leagues, who denied Pitts the right to play in organized baseball.

HOUSE FAVORS ESTATE TAXES

Poll Shows Inheritance
Proposal Would Reach
Sympathetic Hands

By CLARENCE M. WRIGHT.
(Copyright, 1935 By The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, June 11—A poll of the house ways and means committee showed today that if President Roosevelt should suggest heavy inheritance and increased gift taxes as a means of redistributing wealth his proposal would fall into sympathetic hands.

The check disclosed that of the 25 committeemen, 14 would go along on an inheritance-gift tax program, most of them without qualification. Two others said they would not, while nine were doubtful.

A Democrat, one of the two opposing such an idea, said privately the President had been told any change in basic tax structures a year before the next presidential election would be "very bad politics."

Any tax measure proffered would either have to start through congress by winning approval of the ways and means committee or be attached by the senate or house to some other bill sanctioned by that committee.

No Set Tax Rate

No one on Capitol Hill had any positive idea as to what inheritance and gift tax rates might be in mind. The survey of the house committee was made on the basis of an assertion by Secretary Morgenthau before the senate finance committee. Saying that if the bonus were paid new taxes would be needed, he asserted that the application of present income tax rates to inheritances and gifts would bring in $300,000,000 to $600,000,000 annually.

That would mean taxes ranging from 4 per cent on inheritances and gifts of over $50,000 to nearly 63 per cent of those over $1,000,000. There are no direct inheritance levies now, and gift taxes range from 3% of one per cent on gifts under $10,000 to 45 per cent of gifts over $10,000.

Most ways and means committeemen requested that their attitude toward the suggested increase be kept anonymous. One of the committee's tax leaders, Chairman Hill (D. Wash.) said last week, however, that such a plan was a "wholesome idea."

Cites Great Britain

Representatives Sanders (D. Tex.) and Dingell (D. Mich.) made no secret of their positions. The former said that "our estate taxes are nowhere as high as those in Great Britain."

Great Britain now has what are called "death duties" which, according to figures here, brought in $400,000,000 last fiscal year. The United States' estate taxes are estimated to yield about $190,000,000 this fiscal year, ending June 30. The United States' estate tax is paid by the state. It ranges from 1 to 60 per cent, with amounts paid to states deductible.

Some committeemen, dubious about the results of imposing taxes of 4 to 63 per cent on top of the estate levies, suggested it might be advisable to consider re-arranging the present estate tax system.

They said the effect of the taxes discussed by Morgenthau would be this: A $15,000,000 estate might first pay $7,386,600 in federal and state taxes, leaving a balance of $7,613,400 if all that money were left to one heir and subjected to taxes as unearned income, the government would collect around $4,500,000 more, leaving the single heir only about $3,000,000 out of the original $15,000,000.

The trial of the defendants in Washington state courts under Washington's new law providing death for kidnapers was virtually assured today with the announcement by Hoover that the decision rested with J. Curtis Dennis, United States district attorney at Tacoma.

Dennis promised to recommend the kidnapers be tried in state courts so they would receive "the severest penalty possible."

He said a supplementary trial in federal court may be necessary.

Hoover announced that the Weyerhaeuser boy had positively identified a bungalow at Spokane, Wash., as the hideout in which he was held captive.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 11.—Bench warrants for the arrest of three alleged members of the so-called Steubenville "numbers" pool were in the hands of officers today after the trio forfeited bail by non-appearance for trial.

The men sought are John "Blinky" Brogan, Charles Smith and William Laugh, all of Steubenville, O. They were arrested several months ago in lottery raids by state troopers.

"We'll never be captured alive!"

the leader boasted when he tied up a guard from the reformatory where Morris, a bank robber, three murderers and another robber broke out May 12.

Prison officials feared a fight to death if the law overakes Morris and his men. They could be tried for the death penalty, under Kentucky's armed robbery statute, for holding up guards in breaking prison. They got machine guns and sawed off shotguns then armaments such as they flourished last night.

"We'll try them under everything we can get," Warden Elmer Deatheredge promised. He hustled the captain of the prison guard, Leslie De Rosset, and two carloads of men after the gang.

The youthful band, ranging in age from 12 to 15 years, started out in the general direction of Hollywood but got only as far as the Hudson river. They spent the night along the waterfront and when two policemen found them they were more than willing to go back to their homes.

The youngsters said they had tired of school and wanted to see the world. Their resources totaled $1.

With the closing of the school year many children turn to the Library for recreational and serious reading.

Here is a delightful room, fully equipped for the children's use. Those in charge are always ready to help the children in selecting the books they are most interested in; to compile a reading list for the summer; get the book which tells how to make airplanes, radios, boats, tree-houses, doll clothes, etc.

Like the older groups, the boys and girls are very fond of the mystery books. Requests are made for plays which are worked out and put on in the neighborhood for a penny admission.

There is an increased interest of late in marionettes and puppets. So here can be found an array of books by such famed puppeteers as Tony Sarg, Munger and Elder.

Earlier in the session, the delegates heard former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois sound the battle cry, "Save the Constitution."

Appland Lowden

The flag draped coliseum, which took on the appearance of a national convention, although it housed delegates from only 10 states of the middlewest, corn, hot and wheat belts rang with applause as Lowden declared: "Hundreds of thousands of patriotic men and women of the Democratic party will rally to our banner, in the gravest crisis since the Civil war."

The keynoter, Harrison E. Spangler of Iowa, said: "We call upon all Americans to join us in an effort to defend and re-establish American social, economic and political institutions."

At the shrine of Abraham Lincoln in Oak Ridge cemetery, thousands heard former Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde demand "Constitutional government and individual liberty."

Other charges leveled at the President in the "declaration of grievances" included two on the farm problem.

"He has destroyed our food and in producing less to live on, has completed a decline in our living standard," and "while spending millions to retire acreage, he has spent hundreds of millions to reclaim millions of acres heretofore uninhabited."

The attack on President Roosevelt included shots by John D. M. Hamilton of Kansas, named permanent chairman.

"We find despotism set up on a fixed course to destroy this government," he charged. "We need no longer resort to pussy footing terms when we speak of those who have deliberately planned a permanent state bureaucracy."

Waley and his wife implicated Mahan as the third member of the gang.

Removal of Mr. and Mrs. Waley to Tacoma to face mail fraud charges in connection with the kidnaping was awaited today, with further concentration here of department of justice agents.

Four more government men had come from Tacoma, and it was believed they brought warrants issued there yesterday charging the Waleys and Mahan with conspiracy in the use of the mails to defraud. Three more agents arrived later.
